

The Other - without fear, favour or prejudice -

The book comprises a story, told by a High Court judge, spanning the southern African region during momentous change. Zimbabwe, Namibia, Zambia and South Africa, in particular, underwent revolutionary change as their people were liberated from the yoke of oppression. It traces the life of a person who starts life in Zimbabwe and later has experience of all the countries in the region. It includes some hitherto unknown facts of significant historical interest. It is a very unique biography, intriguing, fascinating, keeping the reader enthralled. The beauty and magic that is Africa is an ever present backdrop and its animals easily come through as stars. There is also notable human drama, especially in the justice system. A plethora of real issues arise. Political correctness is discarded as inconvenient truths and convenient untruths are thrown up for keen consideration. Racism, ethnicity, xenophobia, human rights, systemic corruption, functional integrity, patronage, justice and their subsets such as capital punishment, rape, infanticide, hypocrisy, affirmative action and systemic alienation are brought into focus on account of real life experiences. It should be of special interest to historians, academics, social scientists, political analysts, judges, advocates, lawyers, jurists and especially all those who know in their hearts that they are treated as different. A must read for members of the NAACP of America.
